The Mas de Burle is a lovingly renovated private property set in a very privileged and secluded location in Provence. Though never originally intended for holiday letting, the property is now offered to affluent holidaymakers for the months of July and August, in a luxury package that includes the services of resident staff.

It was our task to create a website and brochure that would attract the exclusive clientele to which this offer is addressed.

Nashdesign was fortunate to have the people in place for a quick and efficient gathering of story and photos. Copywriter Mark Brutton lives not far from the property and photographer Jon Wyand was in the region to photograph French vineyards, which is his speciality.

The website, designed and built by Nashdesign with Flash animation techniques to echo the style of the brochure, with pages that turn like the pages of a book - to the accompaniment of a nightingale's song.
